Google Dorks Commands

Finding FTP Servers & Websites Using HTTP

To start, we'll use the following dork to search for file transfer servers published sometime this year. Searching for these servers can allow us to find files that are supposed to be internal, but were unknowingly made public.

intitle:"index of" inurl:ftp after:2018

These servers become public because the index file of their FTP server is the kind of data that Google loves to scan — a fact people tend to forget. Google's scanning leads to a complete list of all the files contained within the server being searchable on Google.

If we want to find insecure webpages still using HTTP to poke at, we can modify the command slightly to do so by changing the "ftp" to "http" and re-running the search.

intitle:"index of" inurl:http after:2018

Searching that string should produce a list of lots and lots of websites using HTTP, ready to be attacked. But if we're looking for a specific type of site, we can go even further.

If we want to start attacking some easy targets, we can be more specific and search for online forms still using HTTP by changing the text in the search title.

intitle:"forum" inurl:http after:2018
```

We can keep adding search operators like AND inurl:"registration" to get more specific and hunt down the registration pages of insecure form websites.

intitle:"forum" inurl:http after:2018

Here you can see we've found a list of vulnerable online forums using HTTP.

Step 1Find Log Files with Passwords

The next step will be to search for files of the .LOG type. Searching for LOG files will allow us to look for clues about what the credentials to the system or various user or admin accounts might be.

The dork we'll be using to do this is as follows.

allintext:password filetype:log after:2018
```

When searching for current log files exposed to the internet, we find this almost immediately.

This log states that the password is the default one, which takes just a simple Google search of the OpenCast Project website to discover. With one search, we've possibly found the credentials to this system without hacking anything at all.

Step 2 Find Configuration Files with Passwords

Configuration files should not be public pretty much ever, and .ENV files are great examples of this. If we search for .ENV files that contain a string for the database password, we instantly find the password to this database we've discovered.

filetype:env "DB_PASSWORD" after:2018
```

filetype:env "DB_PASSWORD" after:2018   🎤 🔍

inventivaclick.com/.env ▼
... DB_PORT=3306 DB_DATABASE=inventiv1_laranew DB_USERNAME=inventiv1_lvweb DB_PASSWORD=pasRE%&/45+45 BROADCAST_DRIVER=log ...

If we remove the after:2018 we can see older log files also exposing services to the internet.

Step 3 Find Email Lists

Email lists are a great way of scraping email addresses and trying to find information on corporate or school targets. These lists are frequently exposed by companies or schools that are trying to organize email lists for their members.

To find them, we'll be looking for spreadsheet .XLS file type with the string "email.xls" in the URL.

filetype:xls inurl:"email.xls"

About 259 results (0.43 seconds)

[XLS] Sheet1

https://www.ohio.edu/orgs/tsc/minutes/email.xls ▼

[XLS] email.xls

www.masdemiejour.com/upload/email.xls ▼

While these results are useful, be careful not to download any file without first considering if it's a honeypot. Many people will take popular dorks and then leave a server hosting a file that looks vulnerable but could instead contain malware.

Step 4Find Open Cameras

Finally, if you thought Shodan was the only service that can find weird open cameras, you were dead wrong. Camera login and viewing pages are usually HTTP, meaning Google is happy to index them and provide them for viewing if you know the right search string.

One common format for webcam strings is searching for "top.htm" in the URL with the current time and date included. You'll find a lot of results this way.

inurl:top.htm inurl:currenttime

inurl:top.htm inurl:currenttime

The first result is a webcam that appears to be the Windows XP background from another angle in Belmullet, Ireland.

Another dork for cameras that produces outstanding results searches for a common live-view page hosted on routers.
inurl:"lvappl.htm"

Using this dork, I was able to locate the best camera of all, the birdcam1.

Please do not hack the bird cam, but feel free to enjoy it here. Many other cameras are available, though all are less interesting than birdcam1.

Many cameras also monitor inside factories or industrial areas.

While you can view the cameras I demonstrated without a password; many dorks look for webcam login pages that have a well-known default password. This tactic, while illegal, allows easy access to many webcams not intended for public viewing.

ets take a look at the special google search operators that are used to construct those high powered google hack search terms.

Specifying intitle, will tell google to show only those pages that have the term in their html title. For example intitle:"login page" will show those pages which have the term "login page" in the title text.

allintitle

Similar to intitle, but looks for all the specified terms in the title.

inurl

Searches for the specified term in the url. For example inurl:"login.php".

allinurl

Same as inurl, but searches for all terms in the url.

filetype

Searches for specific file types. filetype:pdf will looks for pdf files in websites. Similarly filetype:txt looks for files with extension .txt ext

Similar to filetype. ext:pdf finds pdf extension files.

intext

Searches the content of the page. Somewhat like a plain google search. For example intext:"index of /".

allintext

Similar to intext, but searches for all terms to be present in the text.

Limits the search to a specific site only. site:nullbyte.com

3- THE FORMULA OF GOOGLE DORKS

Dorks : They are like search criteria in which a search engine returns results related to your dork.
The process can be a little time consuming, but the outcome will be worth it after learning on how to use dorks.

Basic Formula of dork,

"inurl:."domain"/"dorks" "

So you would normally understand it like this:
"inurl" = input URL
"domain" = your desired domain ex. .gov
"dorks" = your dork of your choice

Here is another example of that

You can use following words instead of inurl :

intitle:
inurl:
intext:
define:
site:
phonebook:
maps:
book:
froogle:
info:
movie:
weather:
related:
link:

All these also help yo find other things then vulnerables.

Anyway now I am going to explain you how to use some for finding vulnerability in websites.

INTITLE:

You can use the intitle to find anything in the title of the website. Which also could be usefull to find downloads or anything else.

intitle: index of mp3

This is an example to download mp3 songs for free.

INURL:

The inurl basicly looks for anything after the : in the site urls.

inurl:index.php?id=

INTEXT:

you can find literally everything using intext, you could even use the inurl dorks whit this.

intext:"Design & Developed By Seawind Solution Pvt.Ltd."

Google will give you all the websites created by IT Masons taht recently has bypass Admin Page Vulnerability in some websites, to try just choose a target from google and add this to the url /adminpanel/

And fill username and password like the information below :
Username : '=' 'OR' Password : '=' 'OR'
and you will get the admin panel of the website some example:
http://www.vulnerablewebsite.com/adminpanel/index.php

DEFINE

Google will define this massage and will look for what had this error for example, define:"sql syntax error"

SITE:

Obvious, when we will use it, google will looks for a site .

site:wonderhowto.com

Google will look for any site related with wonderhowto.

PHONEBOOK:

It will look for the phone number related to me, so use your victims name or yours instead.

phonebook:Mr*nakupenda*

MAPS:

Google will look on google maps for your search.

BOOKS:

Google has an online library store. If you want to find interesting books use this dork.

book:java language

This will look for any book gogole hase indexed whith java language in it.

FROOGLE:

Used for froogle search instead of google.

INFO:

google looks for anything you inputted but only information about string which you have puted next to info:.

info:firefox

Above dork will show you alot off things about firefox like what is firefox etc.

MOVIE:

You can find information about movies on google using this dork.

movie:watch Transformers online

WEATHER:

You can find information about weather on google using this dork.

weather: 01/08/2015 london

Weather Now

Updated twice an hour, this selection of weather stations from around the UK gives a quick and simple way to find out wh conditions are right across the country.

RELATED:

This will look for anything related to what you have entered next to related: .

related:hacking

Google responds whith sites about hacking stuffs.

LINK:

This one will works better instead of only looking in search url, it will also look in the site for urls that possibly are vulnerable.

link:index.php?id=

This is verry usefull I would say even more then inurl.

Vulnerability Approach :

Once you search website using above dorks, now its time to check whether the website is vulnerable to SQL injection or not, we simply put in a quote " ' " at the end of the url address.

So our site will look like this,

http://www.site.com/index.php?id=123;

i will explain how to proceed advanced sqli in the next tutorial

4-SOME EXTRAS

As far as i researched Google Dorks can help us getting the data of many websites.
These are some Google Dorks which can affect our online business:
site:.com intitle:"Thank You For Your Order" intext:Click Here to Download site:.com intitle:"Thank You For Your Purchase" intext:Click Here to Download intitle:Thank you for your Purchase! intext:PLR OR MRR OR Package OR Bonus inurl:/thankyou.html intitle:Thank you for your order! intext:Click Here to Download

5-CONCLUSION

Google dorks are very important, so I advise before you start your exploits against a particular victim the best way is to use google and see what you can find about the victim, and believe me, byt using google, a lot of times I did not even turn on Linux kali, by simple search on google, I found the password of my victim.

6- USEFUL WEBSITES

As far as i researched the best website for fresh google dorks is the exploit db website https://ww.exploit-db.com here you will find fresh google dorks and you can also submits yours.

another cool website is http://www.google-dorking.com you can also mention some websites here
